STORY OF THE HOTEL DES IN-VALIDES.

In the court of honor, just under the me of the great gateway of the hotel es Invalides, the visitors may see an old brass gold-piece bearing upon its breech the following inscription: Louis here in 1715." she Great honored, with his angust presence, for the first time, his hotel des Invalides, on the 9th of May, 1705. That was a famous day. The war-worn veterans were ranged in line; two thousand brave fellows, all more or less mutilated in war, pressed round the pierced and tattered banners they had won in many hard contested fields. Some had fough at Fribourg or Rocroy, others at the passage of the Rhine, or the taking of Maestricht; a few of the oldest had assisted the capture of Rochelle, marched under Richelieu and remembered Marshal Turenne. Louis XIV, was to pay his first visit to these relies of his battalions, and they were awaiting his coming.

At length, surrounded by a magnificent cortege of guards and nobles, the royal carriage approached. With that delicate courtesy so well understood by the king, the troops in attendance were ordered to fall back as he entered the "M. de Bretenil," said the monarch
